Day 3 · A 75-minute live workshop

Help the buyer understand what works, what does not, and what to do next.

From a first meeting to a useful plan

We will learn the approach, discuss the difficult moments, then practice the full conversation.

Before the visit

Prepare useful comparisons and set expectations.

At the home

Give the buyer room to react, then understand those reactions.

Before you leave

Connect priorities, concerns, and timing to an agreed plan.

Practice together

Take turns as agent, buyer, and observer. Give feedback and retry.

Give each home a reason to be on the tour

Use what the buyer told you to propose two or three useful comparisons.

Connect to a need

“You wanted room to work from home. This one has an enclosed office.”

Name the tradeoff

“The yard is smaller than you asked for. Would comparing the layout still be useful?”

Confirm the visit

Check access, showing instructions, the meeting plan, and the applicable brokerage-approved agreement.

Make it safe to dislike the home

“Drop the rope” means the buyer can be honest without having to defend their reaction.

"I'm excited to show you around. You do not have to make this home work. Tell me what you like and what you would change. That helps us figure out what to look for next."

Let them experience the home

Stay available, notice their reactions, and contribute information that helps them decide.

Give them room

Let the buyer look and talk. You do not need to narrate every room.

Follow their reaction

"You paused in the office. What were you picturing using it for?"

Separate fact from guess

If a property question is unresolved, say so and explain how you will seek the answer.

Questions that make the next home a better fit

Choose a question that follows the buyer's answer. You do not need to ask the whole list.

Understand the use

"How would you use this space?" · "What is difficult about your current setup?"

Find the difference

"What worked better in the other home?" · "What made this one feel different in person?"

Explore priorities

"Which part would you miss most?" · "What would make that tradeoff worth considering?"

Check your understanding

"So a separate workspace matters more than an extra bedroom - is that right?"

Ask for a few minutes before they leave

Make the purpose clear: use today's reactions to decide what would help next.

"Thanks for being honest about the house. Do you have a couple of minutes? I'd like to understand what worked and what didn't so we can make the next step useful for you."

"The kitchen and yard did not work."

Fictional example: the buyer rejects the first home. The agent uses that answer to learn what a better fit would look like.

Buyer

"The kitchen felt dated, and the yard was too small."

Agent

"What do you need the yard to let you do?"

Buyer

"We want room for our two dogs to run. We do not want a renovation project."

Agent

"If the yard worked and the kitchen was ready to use, how close would that get us? What else would still be missing?"

Acknowledge. Understand. Offer useful help.

A concern deserves both empathy and a response that fits the reason behind it.

Acknowledge

"I can understand why feeling tied down would give you pause."

Ask to understand

"What would you want to keep flexible? What drew you to looking at homes now?"

Offer a solution

Use their answer to propose useful information, a comparison, a next conversation, or a plan to wait.

Make preparation relevant to their situation

The usual time to introduce financing is when the buyer raises it or at the end of the first showing.

Start with the goal

"If we find a home that fits, would you be using financing? Have you worked with a lender already?"

Learn the timing

"What is driving that timeframe?" · "What needs to happen before you can move?"

Connect the help

"Would it help to understand the payment range before we choose the next homes?"

Turn the answers into an agreement

Fictional example: the buyer needs a usable yard, wants no renovation, and is deciding whether to buy before a lease ends in four months.

"We'll focus on move-in-ready homes with room for the dogs. You'd like payment information before deciding whether buying fits. With your permission, I'll introduce you to a lender today. You'll choose a time to talk, and we'll reconnect Tuesday at 6 to decide what makes sense next. Does that plan work for you?"

Can the buyer explain the plan back to you?

A useful next step answers these questions in plain English.

Why this step?

What did we learn today, and what question or need does this address?

Who does what?

What will you do? What has the buyer agreed to do? What remains unresolved?

When do we reconnect?

Agree on a time or a clear trigger and a useful way to communicate.

Save what changed and what you promised

The next contact should have a valid business reason connected to this buyer.

Factual note

Record what worked, what did not, the reason for timing, and the agreed plan. Keep unknowns unknown.

Correct stage

Use Met with customer after the first appointment; Showing homes after the second.

Follow-through

Use a dated FUB task to support the agreed action. Deliver the update even if an outside answer is still pending.

Your next showing should end with a plan

You should now be able to guide the visit from the first welcome through the next agreed step.

Conduct the showing

Prepare useful comparisons and make honest reactions welcome.

Understand the buyer

Follow their answers into priorities, concerns, and timing.

Build momentum

Recommend a useful next step, confirm the plan, and follow through.

Practice notes

Use fictional details. Write before the example, practice aloud, and retry one specific part after feedback. During a live session, submit through your own login; this printable worksheet is a backup and does not submit for you. The form follows the presenter. Submit before the class moves on, or ask the presenter to return to the question.

“That is not what we asked for.”

A buyer wants a home office and a large yard. Your suggested home has an office but a small yard. They say, “You are not listening.” What is your best next move? Explain why.

- Explain why the office makes this home worth seeing and finish the tour.
- Acknowledge the mismatch and ask what they need from the yard before revising the plan.
- Replace it with the largest-yard home in the search and keep the appointment time.

Choose one, then explain your own response.

Explain your choice. What would change if the yard were nonnegotiable?

One home. Two different reactions.

During a first tour, one buyer loves the open living area. Their partner says, “I could never work from home here.” What would you do first, and why?

- Explore whether the dining area could become a workspace.
- Ask each buyer how they would use the home during a normal day.
- Suggest making an enclosed office a required search filter.

Choose one, then explain your own response.

Explain your choice. What would you need to hear from each buyer?

“Renting gives us flexibility.”

After the tour, the buyer says, “Even if the house were perfect, I am not sure I want to own. Renting gives us flexibility.” What would you ask before recommending anything?

Write your acknowledgment and the question you would ask.

Give two possible buyer answers. How would each change your recommendation?

The buyer is interested. The answer is missing.

After a showing, a buyer says they may want to make an offer, but need the roof age first. You promised an update by 5. It is 4:45, and the listing agent has not replied. What would you do next?

- Propose talking tomorrow morning so the listing agent has more time.
- Update the buyer, clarify the decision timing, and get team-lead help if the answer is urgent.
- Arrange an offer conversation for 5 and work around the missing roof information.

Choose one, then explain your own response.

Explain your choice. What changes if the buyer needs the answer immediately to decide on an offer?

Conduct the visit. Leave with a plan.

Work in pairs or trios. Everyone takes an agent turn and responds to what the buyer actually says.

What did your buyer actually say that changed your approach?

What plan did you agree on: purpose, actions, and next contact?

What did you improve after the observer's feedback?

Observe the assigned learner and round:

- Makes honest feedback welcome
- Uses the buyer's answer in a relevant follow-up
- Connects help to the buyer's actual concern
- Checks agreement on actions and next contact

Observer / learner / round / one correction / retry:

Would your next contact move the plan forward?

Use the buyer conversation you just practiced. Write the note and next task you would save, then explain the purpose of your next contact.

Write the factual note, correct stage, and next task. Include the reason for the next contact.

Buyer practice cards

Case 1 · The home does not fit

"We liked the living area, but I could hear everything from the office. We are still figuring out what matters."

Buyer facts: one buyer takes work calls at home; a quiet enclosed office matters more than an extra bedroom. They want to compare two quieter layouts next Saturday if access works. Reveal the reason when asked. Agent: learn what "quiet" requires and agree on a search and confirmation plan; do not promise access.

Case 2 · The timing has a reason

"We like the home, but we keep saying a year. I do not know what payment we would be comfortable with."

Buyer facts: a year is an estimate, not a fixed deadline. They have not spoken to a lender and want information before deciding whether buying fits. They are open to an introduction, not committed to buying. Agent: clarify the concern, offer relevant preparation, and agree how to reconnect without accelerating their decision.

Case 3 · An answer is holding up the decision

"This one could work, but the roof worries me. I need to understand that before deciding whether to take the next step."

Buyer facts: the roof age is unknown. They would like to consider an offer soon if they can understand the issue, but have not decided to offer. They can talk again at six. Agent: establish what information matters and how urgent it is, seek appropriate help, and agree on an update without promising the outside answer.

What each signal means

Connection status is separate from participation. A submitted answer is separate from a completed action. A record check is separate from writing quality. Record who observed a speaking turn and who reviewed it; a peer observation or self-check is not coach sign-off. Practice readiness, quiz certification, and activation remain separate.

After the workshop

Live session: closing the session creates assignments for recall within 24 hours, a fresh case in three days, and coach review in seven days. The session creator owns follow-up across the selected teams unless a different authorized coach was selected. Confirm the displayed session timezone. Due and overdue work appears in Rep; the daily digest links to work due or awaiting review.

Self-paced study: arrange those same checks with a coach. If there has been no relevant client opportunity, use a new fictional case and mark real-work application as not yet observed.

Keep the first attempt and correction. A useful follow-up asks whether the agent can apply the skill in another case.
