Prepare for a successful showing

Day 3 · 75 minutes including discussion and practice

Help the buyer understand what works, what does not, and what to do next.

What you will learn and practice

For each topic, share your thinking first. Then study the explanation and practice the approach.

- 01Prepare before you arriveResearch the homes and build a tour that serves this buyer.
- 02Conduct the showingWelcome honest reactions and learn what the home needs to do for the buyer.
- 03Lead the post-tour conversationAsk about an offer, then follow the buyer's answer.
- 04Understand concerns and agree on a planConnect useful help to the buyer's reason and follow through.

Prepare before you arrive

Research the homes and build a tour that serves this buyer.

Discuss your approach

Learn the steps

Put it into practice

Review the property information before the showing

Know what the available records say and which questions remain unanswered.

Read the available documents

Review the listing and seller disclosures. Identify facts that affect the buyer's stated needs and flag missing information.

Prepare useful comparisons

Review three relevant comparable sales where available. Note the differences that make each comparison useful rather than assuming the prices are directly interchangeable.

Check practical details

Review property taxes and school district information. Record the source and any question that needs confirmation. Explain the information without guessing.

Call the listing agent with specific questions

Use the call to prepare accurate information and confirm the visit.

Ask about the listing

"Is there an offer deadline or offer activity we should know about?" Ask about seller timing and any rent-back request.

Ask about unresolved facts

"The available materials do not state the roof age. Is there documentation you can share?" Keep reported information separate from verified documents.

Confirm access

Check appointment approval and showing instructions. A buyer's preferred time does not establish access. If an answer is pending, record it and plan the update.

Choose two to four homes for a useful comparison

Use the buyer's priorities, available time and confirmed access to shape the tour.

Explain why each home belongs

"This home has the enclosed office you wanted. The yard is smaller. Would comparing the layout still be useful?"

Respect firm requirements

If the yard is nonnegotiable, revise the options. More homes are useful only when the comparisons help the buyer decide.

Confirm the tour plan

Agree on the meeting place, sequence and timing. Review access instructions and the applicable brokerage-approved agreement before the visit.

Bring information the buyer can use during the tour

Prepare the packet before leaving so you can focus on the buyer at the home.

For each home

Include the MLS sheet and useful comparable sales. Add relevant neighborhood information with its source.

For the conversation

Mark the property facts tied to the buyer's needs and keep unresolved questions visible. Use the packet to support an explanation rather than read every field aloud.

Before you leave

Recheck appointment confirmations, showing instructions and the meeting plan. Bring a physical packet as in the preparation example.

Conduct the showing

Welcome honest reactions and learn what the home needs to do for the buyer.

Discuss your approach

Learn the steps

Put it into practice

Make it safe to dislike the home

“Drop the rope” means the buyer can be honest without having to defend their reaction.

“I’m excited to show you around. You do not have to make this home work. Tell me what you like and what you would change. That helps us figure out what to look for next.”

Let them experience the home

Stay available, notice their reactions, and contribute information that helps them decide.

Give them room

Let the buyer look and talk. You do not need to narrate every room.

Follow their reaction

“You paused in the office. What were you picturing using it for?”

Separate fact from guess

If a property question is unresolved, say so and explain how you will seek the answer.

Let the buyer’s reaction lead to one useful question

Give them time to experience the room. When they share a reaction, follow that thought instead of starting a list of questions.

“This office could work.”

Let them look around and finish their thought.

“What would work better here than in your current setup?”

Ask one question tied to what they just said. Then listen.

“I could close the door during calls.”

Now you know why the room matters. Check your understanding before changing the search.

“So having a quiet room you can close off is what matters most. Have I understood that?”

Lead the post-tour conversation

Ask about an offer, then follow the buyer’s answer.

03

Discuss your approach

Learn the steps

Put it into practice

Ask for a few minutes before they leave the house

Make the purpose clear: use today's reactions to decide what would help next.

"Thanks for being honest about the house. Do you have a couple of minutes? I'd like to understand what worked and what didn't so we can make the next step useful for you."

Start by asking about an offer

First ask: "Did we see any homes we want to write an offer on?"

Then follow their answer. Choose a question that helps you understand their reaction:

What stood out?

"What did you like most about the homes we saw? What did not work for you?"

How would you rate them?

"On a scale of one to ten, how would you rate each home? What makes it that number?"

What would help next?

"Which home came closest to what you want? What would you need to know or see next?"

Let the offer answer guide your next question

Start with: "Did we see any homes we want to write an offer on?"

If they say yes

Clarify which home and what they need to move into the offer conversation. Interest does not resolve unanswered property or financing questions.

If they say no

Ask what worked and what did not. "Which home came closest? What was missing?" Use the answer to refine the next search.

If they are unsure

Ask what would help them decide. Identify the missing information or concern and agree how to address it. A high rating alone is not permission to write.

Understand concerns and agree on a plan

Connect useful help to the buyer's reason and follow through.

Reasons buyers may hesitate after a showing

These statements begin a conversation. Learn what is behind them before deciding how to help.

- “We would rather keep renting.”
- “We are about six months out.”
- “I am unsure about interest rates.”
- “I do not know what payment we can afford.”
- “We may need to relocate for work.”
- “We need to sell our current home first.”

Understand the concern before proposing a solution

Work with the buyer toward a useful plan at their pace.

Acknowledge the concern

Recognize what matters to them: “I understand wanting to feel prepared before taking that step.”

Ask questions to understand

“What is driving that timing?” · “What would you need to know?” · “How important is moving before your lease ends?”

Offer help and agree on a plan

Connect help to their answer. That may mean lender input, research, a home-sale plan, or preparing over the next six months.

Connect the next step to the buyer’s goal

Fictional example: the buyer wants to move before their lease ends in six months, but is unsure what interest rates would mean for their payment.

“You said moving before your lease ends matters to you. Would it help to talk with a lender about the payment and options? We may learn something neither of us knew to consider. If you would like an introduction, I can arrange it, and we can reconnect afterward to decide what makes sense for you.”

Can the buyer explain the plan back to you?

A useful next step answers these questions in plain English.

Why this step?

What did we learn today, and what question or need does this address?

Who does what?

What will you do? What has the buyer agreed to do? What remains unresolved?

When do we reconnect?

Agree on a time or a clear trigger and a useful way to communicate.

Save what changed and what you promised

The next contact should have a valid business reason connected to this buyer.

Factual note

Record what worked, what did not, the reason for timing, and the agreed plan. Keep unknowns unknown.

Correct stage

Use Met with customer after the first appointment; Showing homes after the second.

Follow-through

Use a dated FUB task to support the agreed action. Deliver the update even if an outside answer is still pending.

Your next showing should end with a plan

You should now be able to guide the visit from the first welcome through the next agreed step.

Conduct the showing

Prepare useful comparisons and make honest reactions welcome.

Understand the buyer

Follow their answers into priorities, concerns, and timing.

Build momentum

Recommend a useful next step, confirm the plan, and follow through.

Use this training after the session

Revisit the explanation, try the exercise, then compare your work.

Find the topic

Use the four sections to return to the action you need. Read the example and the reason for the next step.

Practice again

Answer the scenario before opening its explanation. For a conversation exercise, use the buyer card with a partner, get one specific correction, and retry.

Keep a reference

Download the agent reference for the teaching and examples. Keep practice notes separate from real customer records.

Practice notes

Use fictional details. Write before the example, practice aloud, and retry one specific part after feedback. During a live session, submit through your own login; this printable worksheet is a backup and does not submit for you. The form follows the presenter. Submit before the class moves on, or ask the presenter to return to the question.

What should be ready before tomorrow's showing?

You are meeting a buyer tomorrow. They want a quiet office and a usable yard. They have an afternoon available for the tour.

What would you do, and why? What information would change your answer?

Practice preparing tomorrow's tour

Use the same buyer: a quiet office, a usable yard and one afternoon to see homes. Before we move to the showing, put the preparation together.

What would you do, and why? What information would change your answer?

How would you respond when buyers react differently?

During the first tour, one buyer loves the open living area. Their partner says, "I could never work from home here."

What would you do, and why? What information would change your answer?

Ask what each buyer needs from the home

During a first tour, one buyer loves the open living area. Their partner says, "I could never work from home here." What would you do first, and why?

- Explore whether the dining area could become a workspace.
- Ask each buyer how they would use the home during a normal day.
- Suggest making an enclosed office a required search filter.

Choose one, then explain your own response.

Explain your choice. What would you need to hear from each buyer?

What would you ask before the buyer leaves?

The tour has finished. The buyer has mentioned things they liked and things that did not work.

What would you do, and why? What information would change your answer?

What would you ask to understand the buyer?

Choose a statement from the list below. Explain what you would ask, what you might learn, and how that would change the plan.

Which statement did you choose? Write your acknowledgment and first question.

Give two possible buyer answers. What preparation or next step would fit each answer?

Update the buyer when a property answer is still pending

After a showing, a buyer says they may want to make an offer, but need the roof age first. You promised an update by 5. It is 4:45, and the listing agent has not replied. What would you do next?

- Propose talking tomorrow morning so the listing agent has more time.
- Update the buyer, clarify the decision timing, and get team-lead help if the answer is urgent.
- Arrange an offer conversation for 5 and work around the missing roof information.

Choose one, then explain your own response.

Explain your choice. What changes if the buyer needs the answer immediately to decide on an offer?

Practice the showing and agree on a plan

Work in pairs or trios. Everyone takes an agent turn and responds to what the buyer actually says.

What did your buyer actually say that changed your approach?

What plan did you agree on: purpose, actions, and next contact?

What did you improve after the observer's feedback?

Observe the assigned learner and round:

- Makes honest feedback welcome
- Uses the buyer's answer in a relevant follow-up
- Connects help to the buyer's actual concern
- Checks agreement on actions and next contact

Observer / learner / round / one correction / retry:

Would your next contact move the plan forward?

Use the buyer conversation you just practiced. Write the note and next task you would save, then explain the purpose of your next contact.

Write the factual note, correct stage, and next task. Include the reason for the next contact.

Review after your first attempt

Use these explanations to compare your reasoning and correct any gaps. Discussion examples are coaching guidance, not automatically graded answers.

What should be ready before tomorrow's showing?

Prepare two to four relevant homes when the buyer's time, preferences and access allow. Review available property information and comparisons, call the listing agent, explain tradeoffs, confirm access and bring a useful packet. The number supports a thoughtful tour; it does not override the buyer's needs.

Practice preparing tomorrow's tour

A complete plan connects each home to the buyer's needs, identifies missing property information, confirms access and timing, and includes useful documents. Explain any tradeoff before the visit. Adjust the selection when a firm requirement is not met.

How would you respond when buyers react differently?

Invite each buyer to explain how they would use the home. Learn what work calls require before suggesting a room change. Make honest reactions welcome and avoid choosing a priority on their behalf.

Ask what each buyer needs from the home

Suggested choice: Ask each buyer how they would use the home during a normal day.

B gives both people room to explain. Learn what "work from home" requires before proposing a physical fix or changing the search. A might become useful after verification and buyer interest; C might fit after both buyers agree on the priority.

What would you ask before the buyer leaves?

Ask for a few minutes and explain the purpose. Start with "Did we see any homes we want to write an offer on?" Then follow the answer. Do not infer a decision from silence, criticism or a rating.

What would you ask to understand the buyer?

Start by understanding the reason. A firm six-month constraint calls for a preparation plan around that date; an uncertain payment may call for an agreed lender conversation to explore options. Neither answer means the buyer must purchase now. Explain why your suggested help matters, ask whether it would be useful, and agree on actions and the next contact.

Update the buyer when a property answer is still pending

Suggested choice: Update the buyer, clarify the decision timing, and get team-lead help if the answer is urgent.

B fits the uncertainty. Keep the buyer informed before five, clarify how the answer affects their decision, and seek team-lead advice if it is urgent. Propose a next update you control. Do not guarantee a third-party answer. A may become appropriate after agreement and understanding urgency; C assumes enough information to set an offer plan.

Practice the showing and agree on a plan

Look for a welcome that invites honest reactions, a follow-up that uses the buyer's answer, and a specific agreed plan. Feedback names an observed moment; the retry improves that moment. A decision to wait can be sound when the plan fits the reason.

Would your next contact move the plan forward?

The note reflects the conversation, separates unknowns from facts, and records the agreed action. The stage matches the completed appointment. The task supports a useful next contact at the agreed time or trigger.

Buyer practice cards

Case 1 · The home does not fit

"We liked the living area, but I could hear everything from the office. We are still figuring out what matters."

Buyer facts: one buyer takes work calls at home; a quiet enclosed office matters more than an extra bedroom. They want to compare two quieter layouts next Saturday if access works. Reveal the reason when asked. Agent: learn what "quiet" requires and agree on a search and confirmation plan; do not promise access.

Case 2 · The timing has a reason

"We like the home, but we keep saying a year. I do not know what payment we would be comfortable with."

Buyer facts: a year is an estimate, not a fixed deadline. They have not spoken to a lender and want information before deciding whether buying fits. They are open to an introduction, not committed to buying. Agent: clarify the concern, offer relevant preparation, and agree how to reconnect without accelerating their decision.

Case 3 · An answer is holding up the decision

"This one could work, but the roof worries me. I need to understand that before deciding whether to take the next step."

Buyer facts: the roof age is unknown. They would like to consider an offer soon if they can understand the issue, but have not decided to offer. They can talk again at six. Agent: establish what information matters and how urgent it is, seek appropriate help, and agree on an update without promising the outside answer.

What each signal means

Connection status is separate from participation. A submitted answer is separate from a completed action. A record check is separate from writing quality. Record who observed a speaking turn and who reviewed it; a peer observation or self-check is not coach sign-off. Practice readiness, quiz certification, and activation remain separate.

After the workshop

Live session: closing the session creates assignments for recall within 24 hours, a fresh case in three days, and coach review in seven days. The session creator owns follow-up across the selected teams unless a different authorized coach was selected. Confirm the displayed session timezone. Due and overdue work appears in Rep; the daily digest links to work due or awaiting review.

Self-paced study: arrange those same checks with a coach. If there has been no relevant client opportunity, use a new fictional case and mark real-work application as not yet observed.

Keep the first attempt and correction. A useful follow-up asks whether the agent can apply the skill in another case.
