

Winning the first conversation

90 minutes including practice · 27 screens

Edition 2026-09-14-als-live-v3

Before you begin

Eric opens Rep, selects the training and existing agents across teams, confirms the timezone, and creates the session. The creator is the default presenter and follow-up coach. Keep the private presenter console on your screen and share the separate presentation window.

Ask each selected agent to open the session through their own existing login. No second invitation is needed. Confirm that everyone can join and see the current activity. Submit written work before showing the model. Give one correction, then ask for a targeted retry. Open activities under presenter control; advancing leaves unfinished work available for catch-up. Show help requests and connection problems separately.

In self-paced study, notes remain in the learner's browser until they choose to share them. In a live session, the presenter sees submitted answers and progress; unsubmitted writing stays private. Preserve first attempts; a retry after an example is assisted.

For remote practice, use the meeting platform's breakout rooms. Assign pairs or trios and rotate agent, buyer, and observer. In pairs, the buyer gives feedback. Every agent needs a speaking turn, one correction, and a retry. If a partner is absent, assign a coach or leave the observation outstanding.

Rehearse without agents

Create a new Day 2 test session without selecting agents. Open the test learner in a second tab. Advance to a vote, submit a choice, and review it in the presenter console. Reveal the example and check that it reaches the learner. Repeat with a short answer. At a breakout, set up solo speaking practice, speak a turn, save a presenter observation, and check the feedback in the learner tab. These responses are saved only as test evidence; ending the test creates no agent assignments. Existing sessions keep their original curriculum; create a new session for this edition.

What each signal means

Connection status is separate from participation. A submitted answer is separate from a completed action. A record check is separate from writing quality. Record who observed a speaking turn and who reviewed it; a peer observation or self-check is not coach sign-off. Practice readiness, quiz certification, and activation remain separate.

Facilitator flow

01 / 27 · 0-1 min · Welcome

The first conversation

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: Eric's September 14 Day 2 objective.

Learn the lead routes. Choose the right response. Guide the call with ALMS.

Ask the room: Which part of the first call feels least comfortable today?

02 / 27 · 1-3 min · Welcome

What we’ll cover

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: September 14 objective.

- Recognize and respondRead the three lead routes. Choose a call, text, or requested callback. Vote and write your response.
- Guide the conversationIntroduce yourself, invite early, and use ALMS. Watch the examples, then practice discovery in pairs.
- Adapt and agree a planHandle questions and changed circumstances. Watch a full call, then rotate agent, buyer, and observer in trios.
- Follow throughRecord what matters, keep your promises, and leave with a first-call reference.

Use your signed-in learner session for votes and short answers. Submit first; then we compare reasoning and reveal the example.

Ask the room: Open your agent session now. We will pause for responses throughout.

03 / 27 · 3-7 min · Know the lead

Three lead routes

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: INT-012; documented TRU operating flow.

Lead type	Buyer request	How it reaches you
Connection / contact agent	Contact about a home for sale	Live phone connection or FUB alert with contact preference
Real-time touring	A tour, using availability supplied through ShowingTime	FUB alert; not a live call in TRU's documented flow
Standard property tour	A tour at a requested time	Live connection or FUB alert; requested time may still need availability checks

Example: “I requested 4 p.m.” on a standard tour is a requested time. “I’ll check access and confirm with you” keeps the request moving without promising unverified access.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

VOTE · Read the request

3 minutes: individual response first, compare two approaches, then reveal and discuss the example. Let agents answer before revealing the explanation. Discuss their reasoning without treating a short answer as proof of live-call skill. In self-paced study, use the reveal to compare your answer and revisit the preceding lesson. Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: TRU Sales Process; application of the preceding instruction.

Acknowledge 5 p.m., check access, and tell the buyer when you will confirm. Their request gives you a starting point; it does not prove the seller approved it.

Use the requested time while keeping an unverified arrangement separate from a confirmed appointment.

Ask the room: Answer individually first. Then compare reasoning before the teaching example.

Participant task: A standard tour lead asks for 5 p.m. The property's availability is not confirmed. What do you do?

- Acknowledge 5 p.m. and verify property access.
- Tell them the showing is confirmed because they selected 5 p.m.
- Ignore 5 p.m. and ask when they want to tour.

After submission: Acknowledge 5 p.m. and verify property access. Use the requested time while keeping an unverified arrangement separate from a confirmed appointment.

Reveal after the first response:

Acknowledge 5 p.m., check access, and tell the buyer when you will confirm. Their request gives you a starting point; it does not prove the seller approved it.

Choose the response that fits

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R008-R010; INT-009-INT-013, INT-054.

Already connected

Introduce yourself and help with the request. You are already on the call.

New alert, no preference

Call within five minutes of receipt during TRU's 8 a.m.-8 p.m. operating window. If unanswered, follow with a personal text.

Text first / requested callback

Acknowledge by text now; honor the requested call time or explicit no-call preference.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

If the first call is unanswered

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R009, R019.

- Call promptlyPlace the call within five minutes of receipt in the normal flow. Leave an opening voicemail when appropriate.
- Follow with a personal textConnect to the real inquiry and invite a phone conversation with genuine availability.
- Keep ownershipContinue useful outreach while unanswered. The automated introduction is separate from your work.

Hi Jordan, this is Sam with Northside Realty. I just tried calling about your request to see 1234 Lane. I can talk at 4 or 6 today - does either work for you?

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

“Text now” and “call at five”

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R008, R010; INT-013, INT-043.

“Text is better right now.”

“Of course. I can help here. A quick call would also let us talk through the home and your plans - would this evening work?” Text now; do not record a permanent no-call preference.

“Call me at five.”

“Hi Maya, I’m Sam with Northside Realty, the agent who’ll call at five about your request. Let me know if you have questions before then.” Keep five unless the buyer agrees to change it.

“Please do not call me.”

Honor that request. Give useful help through the agreed channel.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

WRITE & DISCUSS · Choose your next message

3 minutes: individual response first, compare two approaches, then reveal and discuss the example. Let agents answer before revealing the explanation. Discuss their reasoning without treating a short answer as proof of live-call skill. In self-paced study, use the reveal to compare your answer and revisit the preceding lesson. Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: TRU Sales Process; application of the preceding instruction.

Hi Maya, I’m Sam with Northside Realty. I’ll be calling at five about your inquiry. If you have a question before then, let me know. I’m also free earlier if that would help.

Introduce yourself promptly, keep the requested call time, and offer earlier availability only if it is real. Do not call immediately just to satisfy the normal five-minute default.

Ask the room: Answer individually first. Then compare reasoning before the teaching example.

Participant task: Maya's alert arrives at 2 p.m. and asks for a 5 p.m. call. Write your acknowledgment.

- What would you text Maya now?

Reveal after the first response:

Hi Maya, I'm Sam with Northside Realty. I'll be calling at five about your inquiry. If you have a question before then, let me know. I'm also free earlier if that would help.

09 / 27 · 20-22 min · Guide the call

ALMS is your call framework

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R012-R013; INT-015-INT-016.

A

Appointment

Make it easy to meet.

L

Location

Understand where and what fits.

M

Motivation

Learn why it matters.

S

Summarize

Confirm what happens next.

Location and motivation can flow in either order. Listen to the person; do not recite a checklist.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

10 / 27 · 22-25 min · Guide the call

Take the first turn

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R013; INT-016.

Hi Jordan, I'm Sam with Northside Realty, a featured partner with Zillow. I'm reaching out about your request to see 1234 Lane.

Live connection

“Zillow connected us about your request...” fits a buyer already on the line. Begin warmly instead of waiting in silence.

Outbound call

“I’m calling about your request...” connects an unfamiliar number to something the buyer recognizes.

Use your real brokerage and role. Do not borrow claims about expertise or relationships that are not yours.

Would Saturday morning or afternoon work better? I'll check access with the property.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

11 / 27 · 25-29 min · Guide the call

VOTE · Now try the opening

4 minutes: individual response first, compare two approaches, then reveal and discuss the example. Let agents answer before revealing the explanation. Discuss their reasoning without treating a short answer as proof of live-call skill. In self-paced study, use the reveal to compare your answer and revisit the preceding lesson. Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: TRU Sales Process; application of the preceding instruction.

Hi Jordan, I'm Sam with Northside Realty, a featured partner with Zillow. I'm calling about your request to see 1234 Lane. Would Saturday morning or afternoon work better? I'll verify access for the time we choose.

Orient the buyer and offer useful times before discovery. Use actual availability. The invitation is a strong default, not a reason to ignore a buyer's stated circumstances.

Ask the room: Answer individually first. Then compare reasoning before the teaching example.

Participant task: Jordan asked to see 1234 Lane and has not requested a time. How would you begin?

- Introduce yourself and offer workable showing times.
- Start by asking for preapproval and budget.
- Explain the entire buying process first.
- Write your introduction and early appointment invitation.

After submission: Introduce yourself and offer workable showing times. Orient the buyer and offer useful times before discovery. Use actual availability. The invitation is a strong default, not a reason to ignore a buyer's stated circumstances.

Reveal after the first response:

Hi Jordan, I'm Sam with Northside Realty, a featured partner with Zillow. I'm calling about your request to see 1234 Lane. Would Saturday morning or afternoon work better? I'll verify access for the time we choose.

12 / 27 · 29-32 min · Ask and listen

Ask permission, then learn what fits

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R013; INT-016, INT-023.

Do you have a few minutes so I can learn what you're looking for and make our time together useful?

Location

What attracted you to this area? What makes that location work for you?

Follow the answer

If they mention a shorter commute, ask what would improve. Do not jump to the next checklist item.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

13 / 27 · 32-35 min · Ask and listen

M · Motivation

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R013; INT-016, INT-021.

Buyer “We really want a bigger yard.”

Agent “What would you like to be able to do with that space?”

Buyer “I want room for a vegetable garden.”

Agent “That helps. What would the garden need from the space?”

“Big yard” is a feature. Gardening gives it meaning. Do not assume dogs, children, entertaining, or any other reason.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

14 / 27 · 35-43 min · Ask and listen

BREAKOUT · Ask the next question

8 minutes: 1 minute setup; 3 minutes each direction (2-minute conversation plus 1-minute feedback and retry); 1-minute room debrief. Create rotating pairs in the presenter console, then open the meeting breakout rooms. Let agents answer before revealing the explanation. Discuss their reasoning without treating a short answer as proof of live-call skill. In self-paced study, use the reveal to compare your answer and revisit the preceding lesson. Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: TRU Sales Process; application of the preceding instruction.

1 minute to set up · 2-minute conversation + 1-minute feedback/retry each way · 1-minute debrief. Switch buyer and agent after the first turn. Your presenter assigns groups; video rooms are in your meeting platform.

“What is feeling too tight in your current place?” Their answer could reveal the purpose of the space. Follow that answer rather than assuming a larger bedroom count solves it.

Choose a question connected to the buyer’s words. There is no required question count, personal anecdote, or fixed order for location and motivation.

Ask the room: Give one specific observation, retry, and rotate.

Participant task: Pairs: one buyer says “We need more space.” Ask permission, learn what that means, and follow their answer. Switch roles.

- What would you ask next, and what would that help you understand?
- What did your partner suggest, and how did your retry change?

Observer criteria:

- Ask permission before discovery
- Ask a follow-up based on the buyer's actual answer

Reveal after the first response:

"What is feeling too tight in your current place?" Their answer could reveal the purpose of the space. Follow that answer rather than assuming a larger bedroom count solves it.

15 / 27 · 43-46 min · Build the plan

S · Summarize

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R013; INT-016.

You're looking in this area because it works for your commute, and usable garden space matters most. We're aiming for Saturday morning. I'll confirm access to 1234 Lane and send the details. You're open to two nearby comparisons. Have I understood that correctly?

Name what is agreed, what still needs checking, and who will do it. Invite the buyer to correct you.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

16 / 27 · 46-50 min · Build the plan

WRITE & DISCUSS · Close this call

4 minutes: individual response first, compare two approaches, then reveal and discuss the example. Let agents answer before revealing the explanation. Discuss their reasoning without treating a short answer as proof of live-call skill. In self-paced study, use the reveal to compare your answer and revisit the preceding lesson. Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: TRU Sales Process; application of the preceding instruction.

"The garden space is important, and Saturday morning is your preference. I'll check access and find another useful comparison. I'll send the confirmed details after I hear back. Is there anything I missed?"

Do not upgrade a requested time into a confirmed showing. Reflect the actual priorities and your promised action.

Ask the room: Answer individually first. Then compare reasoning before the teaching example.

Participant task: Jordan wants garden space, prefers Saturday morning, and is open to another home. Access is still unconfirmed.

- Write the summary and next step you would say aloud.

Reveal after the first response:

"The garden space is important, and Saturday morning is your preference. I'll check access and find another useful comparison. I'll send the confirmed details after I hear back. Is there anything I missed?"

17 / 27 · 50-53 min · When the call changes

"I just have questions."

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R014; INT-016.

- Acknowledge and capture "Of course - what would you like to know?" Answer accurately; say what you need to check.

- Learn the contextWith permission, understand what drew them to the home and how the answer affects their search.
- Offer a useful next stepExplain how seeing the home could help. If they still decline, stop pushing and agree how you'll bring back the answers.

Answers are not a reward for agreeing to a showing. Never guess or hide a known answer.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

18 / 27 · 53-55 min · When the call changes

Keep the first meeting easy

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R001-R004; INT-001-INT-005, INT-016.

Why timing matters

They asked to see a home. A private financial interview from someone they do not know can turn that request into a barrier.

If the buyer asks

Answer their question. Learn enough context to make guidance useful; involve a lender for financing specifics.

The usual later opening

The end of the first showing offers context for a relevant financing conversation. A long buying timeline does not automatically rule out planning help.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

19 / 27 · 55-58 min · When the call changes

VOTE · Respond to their question

3 minutes: individual response first, compare two approaches, then reveal and discuss the example. Let agents answer before revealing the explanation. Discuss their reasoning without treating a short answer as proof of live-call skill. In self-paced study, use the reveal to compare your answer and revisit the preceding lesson. Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: TRU Sales Process; application of the preceding instruction.

"Happy to help. What timing do you have in mind for a move?" Use the context to explain a useful next step and offer lender help where it fits.

Buyer-initiated financing questions deserve an answer. Avoid both a blanket refusal to discuss money and a blanket requirement to obtain preapproval before receiving help.

Ask the room: Answer individually first. Then compare reasoning before the teaching example.

Participant task: The buyer asks, "Should I talk to a lender before we look?" What is the best response?

- Understand their timing and concern, then offer relevant guidance.
- Say financing can never be discussed on the first call.
- Require a preapproval letter before continuing.

After submission: Understand their timing and concern, then offer relevant guidance. Buyer-initiated financing questions deserve an answer. Avoid both a blanket refusal to discuss money and a blanket requirement to obtain preapproval before receiving help.

Reveal after the first response:

“Happy to help. What timing do you have in mind for a move?” Use the context to explain a useful next step and offer lender help where it fits.

20 / 27 · 58-61 min · When the call changes

Answer honestly and keep helping

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R015; INT-016-INT-018.

Your role

“I’m not the listing agent. I help buyers and can coordinate with the listing side. What would you like to know?”

Availability

If the home is under contract, say so. Check any uncertain access; do not promise a showing.

Useful next step

Ask what attracted them to the home and offer relevant options, with their permission.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

21 / 27 · 61-64 min · When the call changes

WRITE & DISCUSS · Keep helping with the inquiry

3 minutes: individual response first, compare two approaches, then reveal and discuss the example. Let agents answer before revealing the explanation. Discuss their reasoning without treating a short answer as proof of live-call skill. In self-paced study, use the reveal to compare your answer and revisit the preceding lesson. Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: TRU Sales Process; application of the preceding instruction.

“The home is under contract. I can check whether a viewing is still possible. Since garden space matters, I can also research some options to compare. Would that be useful?” Keep access and unresearched alternatives conditional.

Tell the truth, use known priorities, keep possibilities conditional, and offer a next step. Do not merely hand the search back with “Want something else?”

Ask the room: Answer individually first. Then compare reasoning before the teaching example.

Participant task: On the first call, Jordan asks about a home that is under contract. You learn garden space matters. What do you say?

- Write your response and a useful next step.

Reveal after the first response:

“The home is under contract. I can check whether a viewing is still possible. Since garden space matters, I can also research some options to compare. Would that be useful?” Keep access and unresearched alternatives conditional.

One call, from the opening...

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R013; adapted from INT-016.

Introduce “Hi Jordan, I’m Sam with Northside Realty, a featured partner with Zillow. I’m calling about 1234 Lane.”

Appointment “Would Saturday morning or afternoon work better? I’ll verify access.”

Permission “Have you got a few minutes so I can make our outing useful?”

Location “What attracted you to this area?”

Jordan: “It would shorten my commute.”

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

...to a clear next step

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R012-R013, R016.

Motivation “What else caught your eye?”

Jordan: “The yard. I’d like a vegetable garden.”

“What would you need from that space?”

Plan “Would you like to compare a couple of other homes while we’re out?”

Summarize “The commute and garden space matter. Saturday morning is your preference. I’ll check access, research the comparisons, and send the details. Is that right?”

Then briefly explain the applicable touring form and the follow-up you are actually committing to.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

BREAKOUT · Your turn: handle the whole call

15 minutes: 1 minute setup; three 4-minute rotations (3-minute call, 1-minute feedback and targeted retry); 2-minute room debrief. Use Jordan, Maya or Alex buyer cards. Create rotating trios in the presenter console and place the same groups in meeting breakout rooms. Let agents answer before revealing the explanation. Discuss their reasoning without treating a short answer as proof of live-call skill. In self-paced study, use the reveal to compare your answer and revisit the preceding lesson. Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: TRU Sales Process; application of the preceding instruction. Rotate agent, buyer and observer so everyone speaks. Give one specific correction and a targeted retry. Do not label a peer or self-check as coach sign-off. Buyer chooses a case from the practice cards; do not hand the agent all the buyer answers in advance.

1 minute to set up · three 4-minute rounds: 3-minute call + 1-minute correction/retry · 2-minute debrief. Rotate agent -> observer -> buyer so everyone speaks. Submit your reflection after your turn.

Introduce yourself, offer the appointment early, ask permission, explore location and motivation through follow-up questions, and summarize the actual plan. Adapt if Jordan has limited time or a different request.

Use a partner as the buyer. When studying alone, say the agent's turns aloud and compare with the two demonstration slides. A self-check is practice, not observed coach sign-off.

Ask the room: Give one specific observation, retry, and rotate.

Participant task: Trios: agent, buyer, observer. Run the full first call using the buyer card, give one specific correction, retry, then rotate until everyone has spoken.

- What did you learn about the buyer?
- What will you improve?
- What changed when you tried it again?

Observer criteria:

- Clear name, brokerage, Zillow connection and purpose
- Useful early appointment invitation that respects the request
- Permission, relevant location/motivation questions and a follow-up
- Accurate priorities, commitments and unresolved checks
- Responds to the buyer's actual preference and circumstances

Reveal after the first response:

Introduce yourself, offer the appointment early, ask permission, explore location and motivation through follow-up questions, and summarize the actual plan. Adapt if Jordan has limited time or a different request.

25 / 27 · 83-86 min · After the call

Follow through on what you promised

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: R020-R021; INT-035-INT-039.

After a conversation

Record their priorities, contact preference, pending access checks, and the exact next action you promised.

If unanswered

Day one: aim for three to four personal touches, at least two calls and one text. First week: ten total including day one, mostly calls.

Once they reply

Follow the conversation and agreed plan. Stop applying the unanswered-lead quota.

Set a task for the promised action. Use the buyer's agreed channel and timing; a reply ends the unanswered-lead quota, not your responsibility to follow through.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

WRITE & DISCUSS · Check your understanding

3 minutes: individual response first, compare two approaches, then reveal and discuss the example. Let agents answer before revealing the explanation. Discuss their reasoning without treating a short answer as proof of live-call skill. In self-paced study, use the reveal to compare your answer and revisit the preceding lesson. Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: TRU Sales Process; application of the preceding instruction.

ALMS: Appointment, Location, Motivation, Summarize. Introduce yourself first. Offer useful help early, honor stated contact preferences, and follow the buyer's answers instead of collecting a checklist.

If one part feels uncertain, return to that chapter and its examples. Ask your coach about the specific moment you want to practice.

Ask the room: Answer individually first. Then compare reasoning before the teaching example.

Participant task: Without looking back, explain how you would handle the next lead.

- What does ALMS stand for, and why does the appointment come early?
- What changes when the buyer asks for a later call or text first?
- Give one follow-up question that turns a feature into a reason.

Reveal after the first response:

ALMS: Appointment, Location, Motivation, Summarize. Introduce yourself first. Offer useful help early, honor stated contact preferences, and follow the buyer's answers instead of collecting a checklist.

Keep this beside you

Teach the point and its reason, then read the example naturally. Examples use fictional buyers; adapt names, facts, brokerage and availability. Source: September 14 reference requirement; R008-R016, R019-R021.

Before contact

Lead type · actual request · property · tour or callback time · contact preference

During the call

Orient them · offer the meeting · ask permission · follow an answer · propose useful comparisons

Before you finish

Restate priorities · distinguish confirmed from pending · explain the next step · record and follow through

Open your Day 2 reference and practice notes. Revisit any chapter whenever you need it.

Ask the room: What would this change in your next buyer conversation?

Buyer practice cards

Jordan · a garden

I'd like to see 1234 Lane Saturday morning. The yard caught my eye.

Buyer: the reason is a vegetable garden; reveal it after a relevant question. Agent confirms what still needs checking.

Maya • text first

I'm at work. Please text me now; I can talk at five.

Begin with the text exchange, then fast-forward to the agreed call. Buyer: a shorter commute matters; reveal it when asked. Honor the current preference and agree the later conversation.

Alex • questions first

I only wanted to know about the roof. I'm not ready to book a showing.

Help with the question, learn context with permission, and respect a declined invitation. Buyer: you want to understand potential maintenance before deciding to tour.

After the workshop

Live session: closing the session creates assignments for recall within 24 hours, a fresh case in three days, and coach review in seven days. The session creator owns follow-up across the selected teams unless a different authorized coach was selected. Confirm the displayed session timezone. Due and overdue work appears in Rep; the daily digest links to work due or awaiting review.

Self-paced study: arrange those same checks with a coach. If there has been no relevant client opportunity, use a new fictional case and mark real-work application as not yet observed.

Keep the first attempt and correction. A useful follow-up asks whether the agent can apply the skill in another case.

References and certification

Updated September 14, 2026 from the existing Day 2 workshop and Eric's approved interactive-training plan. TRU sales doctrine remains the source for coaching the first call and follow-up.

- Your coach and approved team workflow.

Existing quizzes, pass thresholds, and certification records continue through the normal Rep course flow. The presentation link is not a certification attempt.